The D.C. Advantage for Business Education

You don't need to work in Washington, but you need to understand how Washington works.

"An infrastructure bill just passed. What does it mean for your supply chain?"

"New climate regulations are coming. How does your firm adapt?"

"Digital currency policy is evolving. Where's the opportunity?"

These are the kinds of conversations you have when you study at a school based in Washington, D.C., with classes led by faculty who brief the same leaders making those decisions.

From our home in the capital, the Online MBA delivers access and connections, wherever you are in the world.

What You'll Study

We teach core MBA disciplines reimagined for the global reality of a changing world.

- Finance when central banks are active players.
- Strategy when governments reshape competitive landscapes.
- Operations when regulations vary by region.
- Leadership when every decision has policy implications.

With the GW Online MBA, you learn to recognize opportunity in regulatory change, build business models that hold across borders and time zones and turn your understanding of policy into a competitive advantage.
